SPEECHES IN CONGRESS MAY BE BROADCAST

Alabama Senator Wants Body to Arrange for Use of Radio in America

WOULD EDUCATE PUBLIC

Senator Heflin Shocked at Ignorance of National Affairs in Country

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright 1927 by Post Pub. Co.
Washington—Senator Thomas Heflin of Alabama, is responsible for the suggestion that when congress meets again, an effort should be made to broadcast by radio the proceedings of both the senate and the house.

Mr. Heflin has been touring the country making speeches on various questions and he is shocked at the ignorance of the people about what is going on in Washington. Mr. Heflin points out that other things, mainly crime and general happenings crowd the news columns of the newspapers and the government doesn't get what he thinks is a proper proportion. Strictly speaking, Mr. Heflin thinks the speeches of members of congress would get over to the people better by the radio than any other means.

SUGGESTS NIGHT SESSIONS
Mr. Heflin was reminded that broadcasting during daylight hours is not usually so good for atmospheric reasons as at night and that more people have the opportunity to listen after dinner than throughout the day, whereupon he countered with the suggestion that congress could easily adjust itself to the situation by having many night sessions.

To get space on the air, at night, however, congress would have to displace the regular musical programs for which so many listeners in have expressed a preference. There is some question, however, as to whether, if the project were seriously undertaken by congress, a separate wave length could be provided that at least would give an opportunity to those who would like to listen to congress instead of music.

In this connection the question of whether the radio makes votes or alienates them is still unanswered by the politicians. Some of the Democrats thought the broadcasting of the wrangles at the last Democratic national convention at Madison Square Garden did more to drive votes away from the Democrats than toward them and it is being seriously advocated now that if the next national convention should show signs of repeating the last experience, there will be a quick switching back to radio studios where music and other entertainment will be sandwiched in to avoid the monotony of mere politics.

ISSUE BETWEEN HOUSES

As for the broadcasting problem in congress, that body would have to decide first of all whether the senate or house should have preference and possibly if they should have separate wave lengths. Then unless all the proceedings would arise as to what party should have the opportunity to go on the air, in which case there would be competition for the chance to speak.

It has been suggested that public reaction to filibustering would be instantaneous if the radio were to broadcast some of the more serious speeches employed in efforts of a minority to defeat a bill. In any event the subject will be discussed at the next session of congress, especially since broadcasting of politics it was a few years ago.

CIGARET CAUSES BIG FIRE AT ATLANTIC CITY

Atlantic City, N. J.—A careless, ly tossed cigarette Wednesday was believed responsible for a fire that Tuesday ate its way unnoticed under this resort's famous board walk and before it was extinguished leveled a block of buildings, including six small hotels and caused a loss of $200,000. The fire started near the Scattergood Amusement parlor, opposite the million-dollar pier and spread from Missouri to Kansas-ave. More than 500 persons, many clad only in bathing suits, lost belongings. Three firemen were overcome and a policeman injured. The blaze was brought under control after a three-hour fight.

GANG LEADER ON TRIAL FOR MAYOR DEATH

Packed Courtroom Watches Charles Birger Face Court in Fight for Life

Benton, Ill.—(AP)—Charles Birger, southern Illinois gang leader went on trial in Franklin-co circuit court Wednesday for the murder of Mayor Joe Adams of West City.

Surrounded by heavily armed deputy sheriffs and with a troop of small boys at his heels, Birger walked from the jail, a short block to the crowded courtroom. With him as he entered the court room were Art Newman, his former pal, and chief lieutenant and Ray Hyland known as "Lazey Jew" who were jointly charged in the Adams murder.

Young Mrs. Bernice Birger wearing a pink dress and mothering the gang leader's two little girls by a former marriage sat within the rail. Birger saluted his children affectionately and with a son on either knee posed for photographers.

Within the rail also sat Mrs. Art Newman, looking none too confident but loyal to her husband. Here and there other relatives of the accused were watching and being watched.

TWO WOMEN MURDERED IN ST. PAUL GANG WAR

St. Paul, Minn.—(AP)—Shot through the head the bodies of two women were found in the bedroom of their home here early Wednesday. They were identified as Mrs. "Teddy" Dubois, former operator of a downtown hotel, and Anne Grenville, daughter of George Grenville, labor leader.

Police believe the women were killed to "cover up" the kidnapping of another person who may have been slain in a continuance of a gang feud. The women, who were found in the bedroom of a downtown hotel, apparently had been killed shortly before midnight, having been dead about four hours when found by a taxi cab driver and a man passenger who called at the place shortly after 3 o'clock Wednesday morning.

Mrs. Dubois was clad only in a single garment when found and apparently had been in the bed beside which her body lay. Miss Grenville's body was fully clad, and police believe she walked in after her companion had been killed recognized the slayer and was killed to prevent disclosure of her knowledge.

LEAGUE BODY FAILS TO GRANT GERMANY A SEAT

Geneva—(AP)—It is understood that the League of Nations mandate commission which began its sessions, June 20, has failed to agree on the question of giving Germany a seat on the commission, a solution of the problem being left to the league council.

One of the points which is understood to have been made before the commission is that it would be embarrassing for a German delegate to have a voice in the administration of the former German colonies which were lost to her after the war.

NAVAL CONFERENCE AT STANDSTILL

"I'd Rather Be A Justice Than President" Taft Says

BY JOHN T. SUTER
(Mr. Suter has been a Washington correspondent for more than forty years. Since 1921 he has been a member of the Washington staff of the Associated Press assigned to the supreme court.)

Washington—(AP)—Untroubled by the maddening swirl of politics, William Howard Taft is rounding out his seventieth year happier in his daily work than he ever has been before in or out of office.

As he looks back over the two-score years of public service the only man who has been both president and chief justice says quite frankly that he does not consider that he was "fitted" for the political arena and that he would rather be where he is today than in the white house.

He is so well satisfied and so greatly encouraged over the recent improvement in his health that he has no intention of leaving the bench when he becomes eligible for retirement. He will be 70 years old in September and if he chose could retire on full pay in 1931 when he completes 10 years service as chief justice. But he prefers to remain in harness.

GIVES INTERVIEW
These disclosures were made to the Associated Press by Mr. Taft in a friendly and intimate talk with the correspondent just before he left Washington recently for his summer home in Canada. He now has consented to publication of this talk, in which he touched on many personal subjects and discussed with a knowledge no other man ever possessed, the comparative requirements of the presidency and the chief justiceship.

The talk took place in the study which he fitted out for himself some years ago in his home on Wyoming-ave. As he approaches his comparison of the two great offices he has held, Mr. Taft made a passing reference to Theodore Roosevelt.

"The chief justice mentioned without a ruffle in his customary good nature the man who was his closest political friend and then his bitter opponent. He related how Roosevelt had offered him a place on the supreme court bench. At that time

BALLOON FLIGHT RECORD IS BROKEN

Detroit Pilot Sails 580 Miles to Break Record of 500 Miles

Balloon Detroit—(AP)—The world record flight for balloons of the third category, 1200 miles, has been broken by J. U. Rasmussen, Detroit, pilot of the Detroit II, in the third Detroit News Trophy race started from the Ford airport here Monday.

Rasmussen landed at Kingston, N. C. at 6:45 Tuesday night, eastern standard time, to establish a new distance record of approximately 580 miles exceeding the world record of about 500 miles.

Five balloons took off at the Ford airport at 5 o'clock Monday afternoon at five minute intervals, the Detroit III leading. The whereabouts of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company had not been determined at an early hour Wednesday. The Goodyear 4th and the Detroit 1st, dropped at Stouts-ville, Ohio, and Bothwell, Ontario, after attaining 185 and 70 miles, respectively.

RELIGIOUS UNREST IS REPORTED IN INDIA

London—(AP)—The Evening News Allahabad correspondent says that religious unrest is reported from many parts of India and that despite orders to the contrary, mass meetings, attended by thousands of persons, are being held at La Hore. The correspondent says that Syed Bakhar, self appointed leader of the Moslem, has asked every Moslem to carry a native weapon and to eat beef in order to gain muscular strength while women have been invited to carry knives in preparation "for a fight to maintain moslem honor." An appeal has been made to the government to remove Chief Justice Sir R. B. Shafi Lal and to substitute an Englishman or a Moslem. This correspondent says that the support of the demonstrators' funds probably comes from the Khalifat committee.

THREE NATIONS CAN'T AGREE ON CRUISERS

American Envoy's Conference With Japan and England Is Fruitless

Geneva, Switzerland—(AP)—The British, American and Japanese plenipotentiaries at the tri-parite naval conference met privately Tuesday evening in an endeavor to solve the crisis at the conference.

London, Ciel, Admiral Sir Frederick Field and also Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones of the United States navy were present at the Anglo-American parley, which, according to reliable reports, was rather lively.

The next word lies with the governments in Washington, London and Tokyo. It is they who must help or even direct the solution of the cruiser problem which if not settled means the collapse of the conference.

Apparently, Washington must tell London that the new maximum cruiser figures submitted by Hugh S. Gibson embody America's last upward concession, if Washington really means this; and Tokyo must tell Downing Street how Japan regards cruiser limitations.

The situation on Wednesday is that the American delegation has told the British that limitation can only be achieved by keeping cruiser strength within 400,000 tons, which is some 50,000 tons higher than the present American cruiser strength.

The Americans say in effect: "We do not object to you having 70-odd cruisers if you really need them, but distribute the tonnage so that the total will not create a big excess over your present total or even less. If you will construct smaller ships, it will automatically bring down our total tonnage figures."

The only practicable solution now in sight seems to be a private agreement with Great Britain that she will continue to build a certain number of the small cruisers which she has hitherto regarded as sufficient in size for colonial operation as assistance upon the right to build 10,000 and 7,500 ton vessels would bring the British total near the 600,000 ton mark.

Holland is known to have been mentally deranged, according to neighbors and police.

Speculate On What Former Klan Leader Told Prober

Michigan City, Ind.—(AP)—Whether D. C. Stevenson, life prisoner in a 4-hour conference with Marion-co prosecutors late Tuesday told anything not already known or verified any of the general charges of political corruption in the state, was still a matter of speculation Wednesday.

Newspapermen were not permitted to attend the conference but William H. Remy, prosecuting attorney, said: "Stevenson talked freely and frankly and we are more than satisfied our investigation of the next few days will prove the truth or falsity of his statements."

Details of the former Klan dragon's conversation with Indianapolis attorneys were kept secret but it was intimated Stevenson discussed freely his one-time leadership in Indiana politics.

Stevenson is said to picture himself as a manipulator of the state legislature in 1925; named his lieutenants; told how he ordered passed or killed certain legislative measures; how he forced office seekers to sign resolutions promising before favoring them; and how he literally bought municipal elections and hired his work done through trusted lieutenants.

The former Klan leader is said to have told of messages between himself and certain state officers while he was confined in the Marion-co jail following his indictment for the death of Miss Madge Oberholzer and later while he was awaiting trial.

Robert H. Moore, Stevenson's local attorney, said Wednesday that the prosecutors told him they were satisfied with the evidence against Stevenson but that they did not divulge what they learned. Moore went to the prison Wednesday to see Stevenson. Reports were current here that Attorney Holtzman and John-son as well as Prosecutor Remy and his deputy were on the trail of Stevenson's local attorney, who is said to contain the much referred to documentary "evidence."

MAITLAND AGREES TO VISIT IN MILWAUKEE

Acceptance of Invitation Is Subject to Approval of War Department

Milwaukee—(AP)—The association of commerce received Tuesday a cabled acknowledgement of congratulations and acceptance of an invitation to visit Milwaukee subject to the approval of the War department from Lieut. Lester J. Maitland, Pacific flier.

Maitland and his flying companion, Albert Hegenberger, are scheduled to sail from Honolulu Wednesday.

POINCARE PINS LEGION MEDAL ON U. S. FLYER

Paralyzed French Ace Walks After Meeting American Commander

BYRD INSPIRES COURAGE

Crew of America Visits French Hospital for Wounded Veterans

Paris—(AP)—Premier Poincare pinned the decoration of the Legion of Honor on the breast of Commander Byrd Wednesday morning. The ceremony took place at the ministry of finance, in the presence of Sheldon Whitehouse, American charge d'affaires, Captain White, the naval attaché, and H. A. Gibbons, personal representative of Rodman Wanamaker, who sponsored the America's flight across the Atlantic.

MANY INVITATIONS OFFERED
Numerous engagements were ahead of Commander Byrd and his three companions. Various organizations vying for the honor of entertaining the aviators. Invitations have increased since it became known that there is a strong possibility of their leaving on the Levianth on July 12.

A busy day for the aviators will end with a gala ball given by the International League of Aviators and the Professional Air Navigators association.

The monoplane America has arrived at Cherbourg. It took about half the time required to fly across the Atlantic to get it from Ver-sur-Mer, where the landing was made, to the port of Cherbourg.

It is hoped through narrow lanes, mechanics at the French naval station are trying to put it into flying order. Its white stars were torn away by souvenir hunters.

FRENCH VET WALKS
There was almost a touch of the miraculous in the visit of Commander Byrd and the crew of the trans-Atlantic plane to the Hotel Des Invalides and the war hospital there, which is a shrine of France's war wounded.

For the first time since he was brought down at Verdun in 1918, Captain Charles Legendre, paralyzed French aviator stood straight on his feet and walked.

Four courtes, despite overwhelming odds and your splendid plane have given me renewed courage," Captain Legendre told Commander Byrd, his emotion plainly visible. "I will accompany you."

VISIT NAPOLEON'S TOMB
He arose hesitatingly, groped for a moment for support and then with the most obvious effort of will took a faltering step forward. Another followed and the war hero, after resting a light on the shoulder of the trans-Atlantic flier, walked slowly but surely toward the entrance of Napoleon's tomb.

It was moving incident of the stay of the American aviators here. Tears glistened in many eyes at the sight of the party. Admiral de Baudry d'Acosta and Berndt Balchen hovering anxiously about the faltering French ace, visited the tomb and then returned to the grounds of the Invalides, where anxious hands pushed a wheel chair forward for Legendre.

The Americans went to the Invalides at the invitation of the French aviators, "Broken Wing," an organization of war-wounded birdsmen to whom Rodman Wanamaker has sent a warm letter of sympathy, in Commander Byrd's care.

A modestly dressed French girl of about 20, who presented Commander Byrd with a bunch of violets Wednesday afternoon was rewarded with two kisses from the commander of the trans-Atlantic crew of the America.

The commander rose, blushed, took the bouquet hesitatingly and then on a sudden impulse kissed the girl upon both cheeks.

Levine said Chamberlain, because of other engagements, would not be able to pilot him back to the United States. He added that the name of the pilot to be designated would be made public within a few days.

CIVIC COUNCIL'S FIRST PROJECT IS MEETING SUCCESS

Helble Tells Rotarians What Is Being Accomplished at Playgrounds

Work of the newly organized civic council was discussed by H. H. Helble, a member of the recreation committee of the council at the meeting of the Rotary club at Hotel Northern Tuesday noon. The organization of the council and its purposes were described by the speaker. H. L. Plummer, chairman of the council, was scheduled to make an address on its work, but was unable to attend the meeting. The council was organized the first week in May under the auspices of the American legion which set about its formation as a community project. Eight organizations were represented at this meeting, the speaker said. The council includes these civic organizations which work for community betterment in Appleton.

H. L. Plummer was chosen temporary chairman, R. M. Eckmeyer, secretary and Harry Sylvester, treasurer. The same officers were elected to act as permanent officers when the council was formally organized with a constitution and by-laws. Frank Wheeler was chosen vice president.

Most of the organizations included in the council have permanent headquarters who were chosen by their organizations. They represented are the Appleton Women's club, American Legion auxiliary, Knights of Columbus, Elk club, Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions and "Y's" Men's clubs, Trades and Labor council, Chamber of Commerce, First Ward Parent Teachers association, Roosevelt Parent Teachers association, and the M. C. A.

Supervised playgrounds was the first project undertaken by the council, Mr. Helble explained. The need for such an organization to sponsor a directed play program was illustrated by five different groups who tried to put on such a program. Each was ignorant of the fact that others were considering the same project. The efforts were combined in the council's campaign for the playgrounds, he said.

At the first meeting of the group, three or four delegates suggested that playgrounds would be an excellent work for the council.

This is the fourth week of the playground program, the speaker continued. Joseph Eshields, athletic director at the senior high school was employed as director, and ten junior assistants were employed. The five playgrounds attracted 3,600 children, the first week and 5,000 the second. Statistics on attendance the third week had not been compiled.

The council raised $1200 to finance the project. Support was secured from the park board, the Y. M. C. A., the board of education, and organizations of the council. It is hoped that the program may be made a permanent thing, not requiring promotional activities each spring, Mr. Helble urged.

The committee is at work now, he stated, to try to make the playground program extend from year to year.

Other contemplated activities of the council are to improve the camp site in Appleton and to secure a municipal golf links. The organization is too young to say definitely what it may accomplish in the future, and the members do not wish to be too optimistic about its work at this stage, but they feel it has done satisfactory work this summer, he concluded.

SUPREME JUSTICE LIKES HIS OFFICE

Taft was Governor-general of the Philippines and he refused the offer. "I declined because it was not deemed wise at that time, from a Philippine standpoint, to have a change in the office of governor," he said. With him, elevation to the highest judicial office in the country has not, as with some of his predecessors broken personal contacts with friends or with the people generally. He retains a keen interest on current events and reads much, and he does not find himself lonesome for the society of office seekers and politicians.

"I do not mind what is sometimes called the monastic life of the bench," he continued. "I have most delightful associates in the court and very pleasant relations with members of the bar. While a president is a great many people he cannot avoid defending himself against too great familiarity."

The responsibilities of the presidency are nerve-racking. If one consults, like an ordinary man, life in the presidency, while not requiring the same mental and intellectual labor that attaches to the chief justiceship, does enormously consume nervous energy, and is more trying than work on the bench.

"The difference between the exactions of the two offices is that in work on the bench you have the assistance of your colleagues, who share in the responsibility of the conclusions the benefit of oral arguments by counsel, and of briefs submitted on both sides of the controversy."

PRESIDENT MAKES DECISIONS

"In the presidency you often have to make a decision of a question on the instant or overnight or in so short a time that the risk of mistake is great."

"Of course the presidency is the office that attracts in the society of power or one is supposed to exercise and there are those who greatly enjoy its constant exercise."

"The character of work on the bench, if you do not overdo the social part, makes it consistent with long life, hard as the work is."

The chief justice added that he now can enjoy a "real vacation," something he could not do while president. He puts aside entirely the duties of the court during his summer recess and at his place on Murray Cove, Canada, has a genuine respite, from work and makes the most of it.

"I gather all the books I can before starting on my vacation," he explained, "and spend most of my time on my porch overlooking the St. Lawrence river."

GIVES UP GOLF

He continued that his doctor's advice had led him to give up the golf of his presidential days, to abandon his practice on writing his court opinions in longhand, and to have the electric elevator installed in his home to obviate the necessity of stair climbing.

Asked what he selected for his vacation reading and for his moments of quiet recreation during his busy moments, he replied unhesitatingly that auto-biography was his favorite literature.

"I do not care particularly about novels, except by certain authors," he said, and then as an afterthought: "I do not mind detective stories if I can get a good one, and have read many of them."

Now that he has accustomed himself to the regime of diet and relaxation prescribed by his physician the chief justice expects to benefit greatly by this summer's sojourn in Canada. But he would be less happy in his vacation respite if he did not know that after it was over he could return to carry on the work of that unparalleled public career which began 45 years ago when he became an obscure county official in Ohio.

LAKE ROAD PAVING JOB TO BE AWARDED FRIDAY

Contracts for paving the highway between Calumet and Winnebago-cos known as the Lake Road, will be awarded Friday July 8, at the office of the division highway engineer, Green Bay. Bids were asked on the project several weeks ago. Specifications call for a concrete pavement 20 feet wide from the intersection of the road with federal highway 10 a short distance north of Waverly, to the Appleton city limits, a distance of 2.2 miles. The approximate cost of the project is $80,000.

The Lake shore road has been a source of friction between Winnebago and Calumet-cos and the city of Appleton for several years. The road is between the two counties and neither would pave it because it was not used enough by the counties to warrant the spending of thousands of dollars. Residents of Appleton finally appeared before the county board of Winnebago-co and secured an appropriation toward the paving if Calumet-co would appropriate a like amount. Calumet-co refused and an appeal was made to the state highway commission.

George J. Schneider, congressman from the Ninth Wisconsin district, left Wednesday morning for the Menominee Indian reservation to hold a series of conferences. He will return Wednesday night.

APPEAL BOARD UPHOLDS BUILDING INSPECTOR

The decision of the building inspector, John Weidner, was upheld by the board of appeals in the case of Mrs. A. Gehring, 122 W. Lawrence-st., at a meeting Tuesday. Mrs. Gehring wanted to move a garage to the other side of the lot. The inspector maintained that this was contrary to the city ordinance and the board agreed with him.

SENESSE IS BOUND OVER FOR TRIAL ON JULY 12

Tony Senesse, Barre, was bound over for trial in the charge of burglary of municipal court on July 12, when he was arraigned Tuesday afternoon before Judge Theodore Berg on a charge of passing two worthless checks for $25. Senesse was arrested at Appleton, Wis., by a police officer of local business men that he was passing the checks at the time during the Menominee convention here.

Senesse also was wanted by Kenosha for a diamond ring and a gold watch.

SEEK COLORS CARRIED BY MACHINE GUNNERS

Soldiers Want Their Color
Standards to Be Put in State Museum

Major Lothar Graef of Appleton, has been sought by members of the 150th Machine Gun battalion to give information about the colors of the company in an effort to place them in the Wisconsin Historical society museum in Madison. The colors were turned over to Major Graef when the Battalion was dissolved.

A regular army officer was sent to get the colors, Mr. Graef reported, and were given to him. The Appleton man recommended to the officer that they be turned over to the state by the war department, and has heard nothing of them since that time, he stated.

In the museum at Madison are the colors of most of the Wisconsin units that participated in the World War. Those of the 150th battalion are not with them. Because of the fact that these flags were carried in some of the greatest battles of the war, it was held important by the men that they should be preserved with the others.

For each major engagement, a silver ring was added to the colors of the various military units. The colors of the 150th battalion had nine such rings for the nine major engagements in which it had participated.

A. P. Jensen, physical director of the Appleton Y. M. C. A., is on his vacation. Mr. Jensen plans to remain in Appleton throughout the period.

ASK COUNTY BOARD TO GET STATE AID FOR TAYCO BRIDGE

City Will Operate on Borrowed Money for Remainder of Year, Mayor Says

Menasha—The common council took the first active step Tuesday night in the way of securing county and state aid for building a new Tayco bridge by petitioning the county board of Winnebago to petition the state highway commission for the necessary funds.

The finance committee was instructed to settle the claim of the First National bank on back taxes on the basis of 50 per cent which would amount to nearly $11,000. No provision was made for the payment of the claim in full last year and arrangements will be made to pay half the amount at once and the other half after tax-exemption comes in at the end of the year.

The total amount of money on hand in the different funds on July 1 was $240,250, according to the monthly financial statement read by City Clerk John J. DeWolfe. Mayor Remmel told the aldermen that after the bills were paid the general fund will be overdrawn $5,000 and that during the remainder of the year, until tax-paying time, the city will be compelled to borrow money.

The balances on hand in the individual funds on July 1 were: General fund, $22,506.43; water and light, $21,147.73; board of education, $152,359.31; industrial board fund, $68,256.10; cemetery, $27,659.84; firemen pension, $4,860.71; recreation, $3,355.66; recreation, $7,096.76.

Both Mayor Remmel and Alderman Breznicki, chairman of the street committee, urged the curtailment of further permanent improvements for the remainder of the year. The sewer and pavement work for which contracts were awarded last spring and which is now well under way will be completed, but it was decided to put over paying Pine-st until next summer. It also seemed to put over any further closing of streets until next year.

A petition for ouling DePere st. was referred to the street committee. A communication signed by Emil Garske in which he waived all his rights for a sewer adjoining his property was read by the clerk. The report of the superintendent of poor showed an expenditure of $84.58 during the month of June and that nine persons had received aid.

The question was brought up through the adoption of a resolution introduced by Alderman Frank O. Heckrodt.

Mayor X. G. Remmel informed the aldermen that the new plant will not cost the taxpayers a cent as the expenditure will be paid out of the earnings of the municipal waterworks plant and the necessary costs will be brought up through the adoption of a resolution introduced by Alderman Frank O. Heckrodt.

The finance committee to which it had been referred decided to take up the option the city held on the William Remer property at a site. The finance committee also decided to purchase a strip of land belonging to Rose Reech that was needed by the board of education for school purposes. The strip is 7 feet wide and 132 long. D. J. ## SCHOOL BANDS PLAY STATE FAIR CONTEST

Prizes Aggregating $500 Will Be Offered at Children's Day Feature

Milwaukee—(AP)—A state school band contest, with $500 in prizes offered will be a new Children's Day feature at the Wisconsin State Fair this year.

Details of the contest, to be held Monday, August 29, the opening day of the exposition, were made public by Fred C. Borchardt Jr., business manager. The contest, he said, will constitute a part of the general plan to emphasize more than ever before the musical phase of the fair.

Each band will present a short concert of four or five numbers including an overture, an opening and closing march and one or two short concert numbers which may include a solo part. Bands will be scored on tone, tune and execution.

Two other events shall be given consideration in the final markings—a serenading program and a band parade. During the morning from 9:30 to noon the serenading feature will be held in various parts of the grounds, while the parade of all competing bands will be held in both of these events the bands will be scored. The final event, climbing the Children's Day festivity, will be held at the opening of the evening program with all of the bands massing and playing "The Star Spangled Banner" and "On Wisconsin."

DOWNTOWN WORKERS ARE BLAMED FOR CAR CONGESTION

Majority of Machines Parked in Business District Belong to Workers

The only way to solve the parking problem on College and Appleton streets for businessmen and their employees to quit leaving their automobiles on those streets, according to George T. Prinn, chief of Police. A census of the cars parked on these two streets by police officers Friday morning shows that 11 belonged to professional men, 33 to business men, 38 to employees in business places on the two streets, 12 were from out of town, 11 belonged to Appleton residents who are not in business and 57 were not listed in the books at the station.

The census was taken on Appleton street from W. Washington to W. Lawrence and on College street from Superior to Morrison streets.

Many business and professional men and their employees take their cars to work in the morning and park them until noon and then park them again during the afternoon until 5 or 6 o'clock. That is the cause of the congestion the chief believes.

These people should leave their cars in the public parking grounds and the business streets should be clear for shoppers, the chief believes.

If professional and business men and their employees would not park their cars on those streets there would be room for about 100 more automobiles.

GRAFF SAYS MORE WORK FOR "U" DIVISION OFFICE

The Appleton district office of the University of Wisconsin extension division will have a larger personnel starting next fall and will handle more work than ever before according to Marshall Graff, district representative. Mr. Graff was informed of this at Madison where he conferred with Chester Allard, state field man of the division and Chester Schnell, dean. Among the future developments in the division work will be to make Appleton the center for more division territory and more extensive work. Details will be available within the next two weeks after a meeting of the university board of regents, Mr. Graff said.

blies, the chief pointed out. Relief might be obtained by a time limit ordinance, the chief said, but business men oppose it because it would interfere with shoppers.

One method of relieving the congestion is to provide more parking space, the chief said. The streets and bridges committee of the common council is working on the problem and has secured the use of the grounds at the Lincoln school. This will help considerably, the chief said.

He pointed out that another way to gain space would be to move Soldier's square from its present location to some other place. He suggested that the monument and equipment in the square could be placed on the boulevard on S. Cherry street. He said it would be more attractive there and would be seen by many more people. The downtown square then could be used for parking.

ALDERMAN HAS PLAN TO AVOID VIADUCT

Level Off E. Wisconsin-ave and Tunnel Isn't Needed, VanderHeyden Says

A viaduct of E. Wisconsin is unnecessary and would be a huge waste of money because other and less expensive way can be found to remove obstructions to the view, according to W. H. Vander Heyden, fifth ward alderman. Mr. Vander Heyden said he had made an investigation of traffic conditions at the grade crossing where the proposed viaduct is to be built and he finds no need for the proposed improvement.

"At a point about 50 feet west of the intersection, the street dips into a hollow about six feet deep. When an automobile is in this hollow it is almost impossible for the driver to see trains or street cars approaching from either direction," Mr. Vander Heyden said. "On the opposite side of the tracks the street rises above the tracks. This higher grade could be cut down to make it level with the tracks and the surplus dirt might be used to fill the hollow on the west side."

"If this is done cars approaching the crossing from the west would have an unobstructed view of the tracks for almost a mile north and quite a distance to the south," Mr. Vander Heyden declared. "The farm house on the north side of the tracks could be removed and automobiles approaching the crossing would then have a clear view from both directions. "With wig-wag signal and an unobstructed view of the tracks from both approaches the danger at this crossing would be reduced to a minimum and it would be much less expensive than construction of the viaduct which will cost the city anywhere between $50,000 and $100,000."

Alderman Vander Heyden believes that a viaduct at the crossing would be a continual expense to the city because of snow removal during the winter, which is a very expensive process, he said.

FARM LOAN BANKS

Failure of the Bankers' Joint Stock Land bank of Milwaukee to meet its bond interest obligations and the resultant appointment of a receiver demand prompt remedial legislation by congress. This is the third land bank to go into receivership recently, while a number of other banks have been under the cloud of suspicion. Some 57 joint stock land banks have been operated and their outstanding bonds aggregated October 1, 1926, more than $597,000,000.00.

The land bank system is sound in principle, and it has filled an important place in agricultural economy. It has been of great use to the farmers in meeting their financial requirements for the planting and holding of crops and for reducing their mortgage burden to a minimum. But like all semi-political contrivances set up at Washington, it has contained certain weaknesses, some of which possibly could not be foreseen while others have been apparent for years.

According to the treasury department the chief fault of the joint stock land bank system, and the fault which has permitted frauds or mismanagement to close several banks and bring others close to ruin, is the lack of uniform accounting methods which makes accurate and rapid supervision and examination difficult. Congress was warned of this deficiency and danger at the last session when treasury officials appeared before the house committee on banking and currency asking for amendments closely following the language of the national banking act covering supervision and examination. The warning went unheeded.

Congress has failed to make the federal farm loan act protective to the public in the largest measure because it prefers to facilitate farm loans under the easiest terms and conditions. To set up a system as rigid and searching as that of the national banking act would inevitably restrict the operations of the bank and reduce its popularity. The bonds of the farm banks are not guaranteed by the government, but they are sold to investors as instrumentalities of the government, and joint stock land banks are commonly regarded as quasi-government institutions. This being the case, it behooves the government to impose upon the land banks the regulation and supervision that will make their securities safe and their operation sound.

Before the farmers can draw permanent benefits from the farm loan act as set up, the public must be safe-guarded in its purchase of the securities. These banks should be compelled to do business under conditions which enforce security comparable to that of national banks. Therefore, it is obvious the recommendations of the treasury department should have been accepted by congress, and should be favorably acted upon at the earliest possible moment. The whole value of the land bank system to the farmer depends primarily upon its financial stability. It is unfortunate this system was not brought into existence in the beginning to insure this. It seems clear that the troubles of land banks have been due more to internal mismanagement and to loose practices than to the agricultural depression and any attendant freezing of assets.

SENSELESS BOLSHEVISM

The execution of twenty persons in Moscow in reprisal for the assassination of Vickers, the Soviet minister in Warsaw, had shocked the civilized world. The cold brutality of the deed itself and the reign of terror that has followed have served to confirm the opinion of many persons that the soviet system is built on a false foundation; that it is a reign of tyranny and persecution.

The latest faux pas of the soviet regime, because of the circumstances, has been far more impressive than have the many other cruel and senseless things it has perpetrated. The heartless, unfair method of putting these innocent prisoners to death has well merited the protest of the civilized nations.

The soviet government has lost its head. It gained its point by wholesale killing and it fears it will itself be extinguished by the same method.

Bolshevism has stood for some time convicted before the world as a crime against civilization. The ramifications of its infamous intrigues and plots have very properly aroused the antagonism and enmity of thinking persons of all nations. And now the Russian people are themselves asking pertinent questions. Today the soviet, by its insane and vicious acts, stands on the brink of extinction from without and within and when the crash comes the world will be better off.

PIPES VERSUS CIGARETTES

The once popular pipe is losing ground to the cigarette. This is the only conclusion that can be drawn from the various statistics that have been published showing that the sales of pipe tobacco have steadily declined while the sales of cigarettes have steadily mounted and at present are at a high level. In fact, the highest ever recorded. For instance, the word comes from London that the use of the calabash, meerschaum, and briar is on the wane. In the theaters and the clubs particularly, the cigarette is displacing the once popular man's smoke.

The pipe's history is long and picturesque. In each country the pipe has its own past. For instance, when the pipe came into vogue in England there appeared professors of the art who gave lessons for a moderate charge. Books and pamphlets expounded the proper technique, how the smoke should not be drawn into the nose or lungs, but should be drawn into the mouth and then expelled through the lips.

The Indians of America had the calumet before Columbus arrived. Pipes have been found in different parts of the world made of leaves, bamboo stalks, stone, bones, pottery, brass and iron. America made its unique contribution to pipe history with the corncob, perfected by a middle west smoker whose identity is unknown.

But no matter what a pipe is made of it eventually will stink to high heaven. Women do not like to smell them, neither do they like to smoke them. Thus we suspect that the fair sex has been somewhat responsible for the decline in popularity of the cigarette. Whether it is a good tendency or not yet remains to be seen.

VEGETABLES MORE POPULAR

Consumption of fruits and vegetables by the American public is now almost twice what it was ten years ago, a study recently completed by the Bureau of Railway Economics as to rail shipments shows. The survey covers all mail shipments during the past ten years of the sixteen principal fruits and vegetables grown in this country.

In the period from 1917 to 1919 the annual average shipments of the sixteen principal fruits and vegetables amounted to 478,540 carloads. For the years 1924 to 1926 the annual average was 848,099 carloads, which was an increase of 77 per cent compared with ten years ago. In contrast with this increase, the total population during that period increased only 12 per cent.

In general the survey shows that the greatest increases took place in those fruits and vegetables which, because of their highly perishable nature, have hitherto been regarded as luxuries or delicacies, but have not become items of common consumption.

This trend toward a heavier consumption of vegetables is a welcome one and one which will show up in the time to come in greatly increased improvement in general health. We are in the midst of all sorts of new ideas about dieting and calories and all that sort of thing, yet almost all of the systems emphasize that most fruits and vegetables may be eaten with great benefit.

OBESITY, WHERE IS THE STING

Schlom is the "visceral" case. He is out upon the air these days by request. Something had to be done about the suicide wave. But people still want advice about reduction. Almost daily they write in to ask why I don't give an occasional talk on the subject of reduction. Now it seems to me that my favorite indoor sport for these many years has been giving just such advice. It flatters me, too, to know that fat folks like my talks on obesity. Still, fat isn't everything. There are other sorrows, horrors or troubles in the world and I must not discriminate. Then, too, I like to be different. Recently, it seems, about everybody who had access to a typewriter that will run has hoped into the reduction business. The current ones are fairly reeked with reduction advice and diets and warnings about the methods of competitors, from doctors both real and phony, dietitians oven and paper, and dilettantes asserted. The last named experts give the easiest advice: the doctors the severest; the dietitians feed plenty of applesauce and that's what people like. I endeavor to make my own reduction medicine as palatable as possible without omitting essential ingredients. I offer no guarantee, except that anybody who tries my method will suffer no injury from it.

Unlike the general run of physicians in this line I pick and choose my customers arbitrarily. Your own fancy that you should reduce means nothing at all to me. Before I can consent to give you the slightest suggestion I insist on forming my own opinion about that, and to this end I am forced to lay down the following rules for all who seek reduction advice from this department.

1.—Few persons under 21 years of age should attempt to reduce unless under medical supervision.
2.—In certain cases medicines are valuable in the reduction regimen, but safe only under medical care.
3.—People over 40 should strive to avoid every pound of slack flesh.
4.—Reducing by sweat baths is dumbbells' delight for whatever weight is lost in terms of sweat today will be restored within 48 hours in terms of drink tomorrow.
5.—The test of any reduction regimen is that it must not only improve one's appearance but it must benefit one's health.

If you write to me for reduction advice be sure to give your age (unless you use the title Mrs.), your sex (unless you use a name or title that indicates it), your height and weight, and please include a stamped envelope bearing your address, for reply by private letter.

It seems unwise to publish all the details of reduction systems, because that is placing temptation before people who should not be encouraged to attempt reduction. So I prefer to give such advice or information by private letter.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Shrimp

What can be in a can of dry pack shrimp, that is not in the wet pack, that might cause ptomaine poisoning? Which is the safer to buy, and would discoloring wash lining indicate trouble in the contents of the can? I heard that dry pack shrimp was the cause of the death of President Harding's death. Is that true? (A. A. M.)

Answer: I can find no authentic record of ptomaine poisoning from shrimp. Perhaps that idea arises from the accidental occurrence of an outbreak of botulism somewhere. Botulism is a germ disease that may be carried in any kind of canned or even fresh food, fish or meat, fruit and the like, when the food happens to be contaminated with the botulinus bacillus. Shrimp fresh or canned by dry pack or wet pack process is a perfectly safe food, of course it has nothing to do with President Harding's illness. The health authorities do not consider discoloration of the lining of the tin objectionable. But they do advise that any canned food, whether canned at home or in a factory, be discarded if on opening that can you note any "queer" odor or appearance, that is, any odor or appearance, not ordinarily present in such canned food.

How to Walk

I would be obliged if you will tell me whether it is more graceful to walk upon the heel or upon the ball of the foot. (J. J. C.)
Answer: Walk toing straight ahead or even toing in slightly, and let the ball of the foot touch the ground an imperceptible moment before the heel does. This refers to walking barefoot or in moccasins or in other footwear without raised heels. This is the way the Indians walked, and it is the way experienced hikers find least fatiguing. Neither toing nor heel lifting is a graceful, nor is it a healthy, nor is it a safe, nor is it a useful, graceful, happy feet. High heels make one walk like a horse only without the natural grace of the horse. They make one walk rather like a horse with a spring in his back. A horse's foot is about half an inch higher than the heel of the foot. The real remedy is to discard heels altogether. All who can go barefoot should do so for the benefit of general health as well as the feet. Moccasins or heelless sandals are the most satisfactory footwear for walking.

LIBRARY ADVENTURES

HOW "JANE EYRE" WAS WRITTEN

In 1846 there lived a young woman in the little village of Haworth in the north of England who secretly believed that she had it in her to make her name live in English literature. She did not speak of it to others, for one reason because she was inordinately shy and for another because nothing could have seemed more unlikely than that this isolated girl, living far from any literary center, with no influential friends, should be able to crash the gates of English literature at a time when the reputations of Dickens and Thackeray were at their height, when Tennyson was a celebrity and Wordsworth was poet laureate.

Yet the time came when Thackeray was eager to meet her and curts and duchesses pointed her out to one another when she shyly appeared at a lecture. Her name as every child now knows, was Charlotte Bronte and the book that did this for her was "Jane Eyre."

Young writers who complain that for them conditions are not favorable for writing, who feel that they are prevented from producing masterpieces because they haven't a beautiful study to work in, should take a hint from the way "Jane Eyre" was written. Charlotte Bronte and her two sisters, Emily and Anne, had been trying their hand at authorship for a long time in the isolated parsonage at Haworth. They had even published at their own expense a little volume of poetry under assumed names. Finally each of them had written a prose story, the plan being to publish the three in one volume. Charlotte's story was called "The Professor" and she had sent it to London publishers so often that it was frayed with wear. No one wanted it.

At this point a blow fell upon the parsonage that made literary troubles seem trivial. The idealized brother of the three sisters who, they had always believed, would turn out to be a genius, came home a hopeless drunkard and opium eater, burden to the family until his death a year or two later. At almost the same time the father was threatened with blindness. Charlotte took him to Manchester for an operation and it was while she was nursing him there that she began "Jane Eyre," the book that was to make her name known all over the world. Surely few books were begun under more unfavorable auspices.

The outstanding fact about Charlotte Bronte was that she was shy. She was too shy to publish under her own name and when the book was finished she sent it to a publisher in London under the pen-name of "Currer Bell," pretending even to the publisher that she was a man. The book was accepted and still the secret was kept. It had become famous all over England and America and still her own publishers did not know that "Currer Bell" was a woman.

Far stranger than that, her own father did not know his daughter had written a book until it was the talk of England. The reviews of "Jane Eyre," by "Currer Bell," had been flooded in and the writer's father was as much conscious of this new reputation in the publishing world as was a reading family at Haworth and its members kept in touch with what was going on in London.

One morning Charlotte entered her father's study and put a copy of "Jane Eyre" into the hands with the words, "Papa, I've been writing a book." He did not yet understand it was that particular book she was referring to. Then she gave him a batch of laudatory reviews and he finally was made to understand that his daughter was "Currer Bell."

The secret was kept in the family for a long time. On one occasion Miss Bronte was visiting an intimate friend in the neighborhood when a consignment of galley proofs were delivered to her. She corrected them but said nothing and her friend seems to have respected her reticence. After a time it became necessary to confer with her publishers in London and their astonishment was great when a shy young woman stepped into their office and announced that she and "Currer Bell" were one and the same person. And from then on she spent most of the rest of her life trying to escape being lionized. Certainly the reverse from most authors who "make a hit."

Q. Where is the Natural Bridge? Will you please tell me something about it? E. B.

A. The National Bridge is in Rockbridge County, Virginia. It was left by the collapse of the remainder of the roof of a tunnel formed by water percolating through a joint or fissure, athwart the stream. The tunnel thus

CITY SYMPHONY ORCHESTRAS ARE BECOMING MORE POPULAR
Secretary, the American Community

Advertising Association
Before the war you could count on the fingers of one hand the American cities which were the homes of symphony orchestras. Even in those days these orchestras had huge deficits, and had to be maintained by mammoth donations from public-spirited patrons of music.

Now all this is changed. A city with a symphony orchestra is a city that is awake to the benefits to be derived from helping its citizens enjoy the best of all the arts. New industries may not new families to growing cities, but only symphony orchestras and similar things can keep these families contented.

Madison, Wis. is one of the more recent cities to "put over" a symphony project.

Heretofore Madison has raised big guarantees to finance visits from the symphony orchestras of other cities. Finally Madison said, "What's the use? Why not have a symphony of our own?"

A woman headed the organization backing the movement. With the assistance of a loyal group and many civic bodies, the financing was all worked out. A famous musical director from the neighboring Wisconsin school of music was engaged to conduct. He has developed from local talent a band of over 100.

And Madison is now getting music such as it never got before.

See-Sawing On Broadway

By Gilbert Swan

New York. — Events such as the gala parade for "Slim" Lindbergh afford an opportunity for seeing the "other side" of these four looking skirtedancers that form the canyon of lower Broadway and the Wall Street belt.

Under the influence of a great parade the buildings seem to turn inside out and the realization comes that behind Mammoth's parons hide innumerable pretty girls and zealous youths.

Mention Wall Street and one thinks of huge money bags and vast deals. Turn it inside out and to every Morgan there are a thousand gay stenographers in natty dresses, with legs that can dance most alluringly from forbidding looking windows. These ladies can scream and sing with as much abandon as the next one. So this, after all, is Wall Street! Young men in bright-ribboned straw hats and girls who swing gracefully out of the windows. They constitute the living element that which they do in the interest of business and finance is a purely mechanical process.

The newspapers say: "Wall Street finds its soul!"
No, Wall Street merely finds that it is a vast army of ordinary persons who, combined, come to represent the symbol of a dollar sign.

It is largely that way with everything in a great city. Broadway is typically by bright lights, noise and glare. The chorine becomes a symbol of gaiety. Taken in to the girls form an alluring scene. Take them individually, or off duty, and the chances are good you will find a group of tired looking girls who seem to need rest and fresh air.

The illusion of the spotlight is one thing and the reality of the aftermath is another. Many a Johnny has learned that the girl who seemed so divine under the spell of the music and song is just another pretty girl with a talent for dancing.

Turn Fifth Avenue inside out and you find the expensive shoppes concealed another horde of pretty girls; some clerks, some models, some buyers. The rest is tinsel and stock. The stars may have their millions more, but the model is put them on is cautioned to hasten them back into stock. The chances are she goes home in a neat but cheap dress and uses her $35 a week to meet the grocery bills.

A Lindbergh passes and the shops become shells with clerks, models, buyers and all the rest clustered in the streets.

Again the newspapers say: "Lindbergh reveals soul of the city."
What they mean is that, for a moment, the curtain is rung up and one can look upon the individuals who make the wheels go round and who hide behind the draperies.

by Ben Lucien Burman

THIS HAS HAPPENED
LINCOLN NUNNALLY, elderly American chemist, mysteriously summoned to the queer little jungle-buried town of PORTO VERDE, in west central Brazil, encounters an old friend, VILAK, who tells him it was he who had sent for him.
 Vilak's cousin, ELISE MARBERRY, an American girl, owns a coffee plantation and other land near mysterious warnings to get out of the country. Vilak is alarmed, because several deaths already have occurred and the superstitious natives think some supernatural force is at work.
 The day Nunnally arrives another man is killed, TONY BARBETTA, one of Elise Marberry's foremen. He had been hit with a club in the hands of LIMEY POTTS, another foreman. Before he died a strange analysis took hold of him, and Vilak confides to Nunnally that he is certain Limey Potts, thought he may have struck the victim, was not the murderer.
 That evening Vilak induces Nunnally to come with him on a visit to the house of GAYLORD PRENTISS, a retired and forbidding man, known to be an enemy of Elise. Vilak believes Prentiss is somehow involved in the mysterious deaths.
 Before going to Prentiss' place, Vilak and Nunnally call on Elise Marberry. After a few minutes, Vilak demands of Elise what took place in her house that afternoon and she tells him all the rifles on her place have been stolen. Her overseer, Adolf Schwartz, advises her to leave the country.

NOW BEGIN THE STORY

CHAPTER VIII
 Vilak made a quick tour of the building, then closely examined the door. "Good look, all right," he murmured. "Open it, please."
 The little German obeyed, exposing a white stone interior, filled with electric wire, storage batteries, detonators, the delicate, more expensive parts of machinery which might prove too much of a temptation to the natives if left in the ordinary warehouse. The floor was bare except for the few drifting leaves inescapable in this region of superabundant vegetation.
 But a tiny scrap of green, which to the old man seemed just another leaf, caught Vilak's eye. He picked it up and when the German's attention was concentrated elsewhere put it carefully in his pocket. They strolled outside again.
 In a few moments they had left the puffing Schwartz, and were once more inside Elise's brilliant living room.
 "Did you go to see Prentiss yesterday?" Vilak asked. Vilak asked as he leaned over and caught a brilliant fly creeping dangerously close to a spider web in the corner. He tangled the insect's legs in the web an instant.
 Elise watched him wonderingly. "What are you doing that cruel thing for?" she protested.
 "I'm being kind, not cruel," he retorted. "I am trying to show it the error of its ways and by demonstrating that webs are dangerous for it save it from crawling to an unhappy end. But it won't learn. Watch."

He lifted it from the web and set it on the floor. In a moment, it was again crawling toward the web, in another the spider had swooped down and before Vilak could prevent, slain it. "It's a cruel law, nature's law, the jungle law, or whatever you want to call it. And the closer we are as men to it the more cruel are we. Spider kills fly, frog kills spider, the snake kills frog, his snake kills little snake, man kills big snake or another little man, kills big snake or Prentiss?"
 She nodded. "After all, we are the only Americans here, and I felt like a beast for not trying to do something for him. As far as I am concerned he can have the land, he's on for good. I won't dispute it."
 "Did you see him?"
 "Yes... and no." She was silent a moment. "I shan't try again... alone."
 Vilak granted. "Humph... what happened?"
 "I came running out of his house opened the gate, and set that enormous mastiff of his on me. If I hadn't been a fairly good tree climber it wouldn't have been very... pleasant."

Vilak took out his cigarette case and smoked thoughtfully. Nunnally and Elise talked quietly. The old man was enchanted by her charm and intelligence. He added his persuasions to those of her cousin that she leave Porto Verde as quickly as possible, either to return to the United States or to take up her residence in some civilized part of Brazil. She only shook her head smilingly. The talk drifted to their plans for the night and then to Prentiss again. Elise, after hearing that the two men intended visiting his fazenda, remarked quietly that she would go with them. Vilak heard. His gaunt, odd-shaped head jerked forward. "New to me," he mumbled. "Afraid I'll have to contradict it."

"I'm afraid that I'll have to contradict you in turn, esteemed cousin. I'm going."

"Haven't you had enough happen to you when you went out there in the time? You want more trouble?"

"That's not the question." She brushed back a few wisps of hair that had strayed over her dark olive forehead. "It's merely that I've made up my mind about a few things where I've been weak and foolish before. In the past when you have come out on your dangerous expeditions here I've done nothing except sit on my veranda and lazily read a novel. I can't go to do it any longer. I can't with a clear conscience. I'm responsible for bringing you down here. The Victorian period is over. That's the one thing that with all your wisdom, can't seem to understand. A woman's as good as a man, as bad as a man, as brave as a man."

Vilak put a pellet of betel on his tongue and rose to go. "The harm done now open wide, the foolish wives to foolish freedom stride," he quoted.

"Talk away, if sarcasm makes you feel more superior. But with all due respect to you it won't change my intention in the slightest. I'm going. I must you insist on chewing that dreadful betel?"

"Sorry, I must. And with equal regret I must also announce that I shall not come with you. Seriously," he said with finality as he neared the door. "I'm not in the slightest doubting your courage or questioning your intelligence, for which I have the highest admiration. I simply have a very strong conviction—fundamentally it may be based on prejudice. I admit—that whenever men have any connection with crime except as a motive, trouble quickly follows."

"I can't take you with me. Try to understand! And knowing your disposition I might add that if you attempt to follow, you'll be endangering all of us, mostly yourself. I'll be compelled to send you back just as you throw rocks at your dog who insists on following you down the road. Not because you don't love your dog, and wouldn't like to have him along, but because you know the chances are that he'll be killed by an automobile. Now please be sensible."

He pressed her hand gently, strolled to the door and returned with a bundle, part of which he gave to the old man, part of which he put on the floor at his feet. There are boots and gloves for you, Nanny," he said. "Get into them. And put your raincoat on now. I know you'll tell me it's hot but put it on anyway."

He helped the old man into his saddle, leaped in himself, and, waving a half-amused, half-troubled goodbye to his cousin who stood peering after them, a delicate silhouette against the barred door, set off to the road again.

They retraced their route until they neared the bridge which crossed the river. A red glow showed a few hundred yards down the railroad track. "Queer," said Vilak. "Never saw that before. Let's have a look at it."

They stepped their horses nearer and through the brush saw five or six torches burning brightly, the light of which some twenty or thirty men were hurrying about pitching a tent. They were the customary motley of black, Indian, and half-breed, with an occasional surly individual who appeared to be white. They were clad in the mondescript clothing of the typical Brazilian laborer, here a once brilliant purple shirt hanging out over vivid green breeches, there a tattered strip of cloth which had been manufactured as an American suit of underwear.

Most were the dregs of their races, with cruel eyes and vicious, degenerate faces. The teeth of some of the Indians had been filed into sharp points. "Must be section hands," Vilak remarked. "Those in the States aren't the gentlest creatures in the world but they can't hold a candle to the ones they get down here. The cream of the country. Wonder if the railroad sent them up on account of the flood. Think I'll find out."

They dismounted, stepped through the brush and reached the open. In a little depression of the land a bright fire was burning. Nunnally looked at it. His wrinkled face became puzzled. "Er... why have they that... er... yes... that?" he asked in a whisper. "It's hot tonight... a very hot. And they're not using it to... er... melt anything. It's... singular."

Vilak stared thoughtfully at the blaze. "Fires can be used for other things than heat," he answered. He bent down and drew something out of the hot cinders. This he held before the chemist. "Perhaps that, for instance. Mean anything to you?"

"I can't take you with me. Try to understand! And knowing your disposition I might add that if you attempt to follow, you'll be endangering all of us, mostly yourself. I'll be compelled to send you back just as you throw rocks at your dog who insists on following you down the road. Not because you don't love your dog, and wouldn't like to

Her Blighted Life

PERFECTLY mated, gloriously in love, their marriage seemed a perfect match. Then Laura insisted on a gayer life in a more fashionable neighborhood. To humor her, Peter yielded, and life for Laura really began.

At first it all seemed so innocently amusing—the afternoon bridge parties, the cigarettes and cocktails, the "modern wives" she met, with their fascinating, idle-mad companions. Then one day Laura met David Macleary. Suave, handsome, unscrupulously clever, he was wonderfully attractive to women.

If only Laura had listened to the sharp warnings of her instinct, what suffering, what horror, she might have escaped. But once caught in the titanic whirlpool of her own mad folly, she seemed utterly lost. Swiftly, irresistibly, the treacherous current of events swept her along, the helpless victim of a fate that plays no favorites. The story of Laura's thrilling, heart-rending experience appears with sixteen other absorbing features in August True Story Magazine. Its title, "My Wild Ride," gives not even the faintest conception of the astounding, breath-taking nature of this great epic narrative. Don't miss it.

Haskin Is Encyclopedia For Post-Crescent Readers

Lepor colonies, railroad statistics, common carriers in the United States and Nancy Hanks, mother of Abraham Lincoln are among the subjects which readers of the Appleton Post-Crescent have written to Frederick J. Haskin, director of the Post-Crescent Information Bureau at Washington, D. C.

Only one institution is maintained by the United States government for persons afflicted with leprosy, the director stated. This is the leprosarium at Carville, La., and is under the supervision of the United States Public Health Service. The government also conduct a research division at the leper colony under the territorial board of health at Molokai, Hawaii.

The population of the United States is estimated at 117,135,817, Mr. Haskin said. Its area including possessions is 3,742,903 square miles of land and water, and excluding possessions the area is 3,026,759 square miles of land and water.

There are 1,631 railroad companies in the country. Important classes are: Class 1, 174 roads; class 2, 282 roads; class 3, 348 roads; remaining roads are listed as lesser, proprietary, circular, unofficial, etc. The round figure is 250,000 miles is the railway mileage of the United States frequently used for main track mileage.

The interstate commerce commission's preliminary abstract of statistics of common carriers for 1925 gave mileage operated in class 1 roads as: 391,532.78 miles of which 236-

The old man's sleepy eyes narrowed behind his glasses. All he could see was what appeared to be a small bit of charred wood no different than the other pieces of branches which formed the glowing embers. He shook his head. "No... it means nothing... er... nothing."
 Vilak tossed it back into the fire. (To Be Continued)

There is adventure ahead of Nunnally and Vilak. The night is filled with a thousand unseen dangers.

BETTER KEEP WRITING OUT OF PARCEL POST

Several suitcases filled with clothing accepted at the Appleton postoffice as fourth class mailing matter have been found, on examination, to contain written matter such as old letters, bills, receipts and memoranda which subjects the whole parcel to postage at first class rate, according to F. ## RURAL DISTRICT TO ERECT NEW SCHOOL

Woodlawn District Decides It's Cheaper to Build New Than Repair Old Building

By a vote of 16 to 9 members of the Woodlawn school district, town of Center, decided to build a new school rather than spend a large amount of money for repairs on the old building. This action was taken at the annual district meeting Tuesday evening. A building committee composed of the school board and three members at large was appointed to secure plans and bids from contractors and these will be presented at an adjourned meeting in about ten days.

Members of the committee are F. C. Mueller, clerk, Fred Bohl, treasurer, Harry Kotz, director and Henry Haferbecker, Robert Rohm and Frank Lettis. The old school house will be sold to the highest bidder. A discussion of whether to repair the old school or build a new one brought out the fact that estimates of the repairs were placed by several contractors at $700 although it was expected the figure would be much higher. Several persons at the meeting were of the opinion the old schoolhouse would not meet state requirements even after it was repaired and they held it would be less expensive to build a new structure.

A. G. Meating, county superintendent of schools, attended the meeting and pointed out the wisdom of building a new school. He told of other districts which also are building new structures and he advised the committee to visit some more recently constructed buildings to get ideas as to the nature and cost of a building they would recommend in their district.

The committee expects to follow Mr. Meating's suggestion and it will make several trips to other schools in the county. It is expected that the new school will be completed in time for the next school term. The district voted $400 to continue school for next year. This sum will be raised by taxation. It was also decided to allow the school board to borrow money during the next year to carry on in the event of a deficit in the treasury.

Robert Rohm was chairman of the meeting. Mrs. Harry Kotz was appointed to superintendent cleaning the school house once each month.

KAUKAUNA-LITTLE CHUTE-KIMBERLY

NEARBY
TOWNSWANT TELEPHONE COMPANY TO PAY
RENT FOR BRIDGEAldermen Says Utility Should Pay City Because Its Cables
Cross Bridge

Kaukauna—Members of the city council at their meeting Tuesday evening in the municipal building were of the opinion that the Wisconsin Telephone Co. should pay rent for having its heavy cables on the Lawrence bridge.

Alderman W. H. Cooper brought the question up at the council meeting. He charged the telephone company with not doing anything to get the cables off the bridge. He said the cables were a hazard to the city and that the company should pay for their removal. He said the company should pay for the cost of the cables and for the cost of the bridge.

L. H. Shields of Milwaukee, assistant counsel for the Wisconsin Telephone Co. explained that it was not a question of "public utility" and that the company was not a public utility. He said the company was a private company and that it should not be required to pay for the use of the bridge.

Mr. Shields cited the recent case of the city of Kenosha against the Kenosha Home Telephone Co. where the city desired free phones for services rendered the company. The case was won by the telephone company when the court ruled that the city had no right to barter its police powers.

Mayor Sullivan told the telephone company representatives that the feeling in the city for the company was not friendly. He said the city had been discriminated against by the company. Mayor Sullivan said that following a meeting of the railroad commission in this city about a year ago representatives of the telephone company promised to give Kaukauna free service to Combined Locks and the city has never received this service.

Joseph Lefevre, city attorney, said he believed the city could collect carrying charges from the company. He promised full report on the matter for the next meeting.

William Rohan appeared before the council and asked its cooperation in getting the south side road to Appleton paved. He said most of the funds for the repaving and maintenance of roads was going to the north end of the county and he believed it was time something was done for this corner of the county. He explained to the council that he did not speak with authority as he was no longer a member of the county board. If Appleton, Kimberly, Combined Locks, Kaukauna and the city of Kaukauna supervisors would get together there would be enough votes to carry a bond issue, he said.

The council adopted a resolution calling for a committee by the mayor to select names for the city parks. Mayor Sullivan named W. H. Cooper, Bernard Faust, George Egan and W. H. Copp on this committee.

HEAVY CALENDAR AWAITS SENATORS AT END OF "REST"

Duncan Beer Bill Reconsideration Heads List for Monday Night

Madison—(P)—The legislative bodies of the state, particularly the senate, have more than a dozen "big" bills which must be acted upon when the assemblyman and senators return July 11.

The Duncan Beer bill heads the list for Monday evening's senate session, the first session of the week, and is followed by the other "bone of contention," the White gas tax bill.

Although the beer bill, legalizing the sale and manufacture of 2.75 per cent beer in Wisconsin as far as state law enforcement is concerned, has been passed by both houses, the bill may be reconsidered in the senate. Senator Caldwell, who voted "wet" when the bill passed the upper house by a 17-14 vote made the motion asking for reconsideration.

The White gas tax bill calls for a 5-cent tax on gasoline, for the purpose of raising money for the improvement of Wisconsin's highways. There is a substitute amendment attached to the bill by Senator Caldwell, asking the tax be made a 3 cent tribute.

Senator Caldwell has had one 4 cent tax bill defeated and has had one other 4 cent tax amendment, tacked on to the White bill, meet with disfavor of the lawmakers. His latest amendment, calling for a 3 cent tax will be brought up Monday evening for adoption or rejection. Senator Teasdale also has a gasoline bill, his calling for a 3 cent tax.

WOULD BUY PARKS

The park bills also are up for consideration at the opening session. There are three bills, by Cassin, Carson, Carroll and Daggett, and one introduced by the joint committee on finance. All four deal with the appropriation of large sums of money for the purchase of state park land. The Carroll bill asks the purchase of the northern lakes park in the northern part of the state. The Daggett bill would cause the laying out of a state park in southeastern Wisconsin, for the benefit of "of those people not in the park section."

The Milwaukee lawyers' troubles will be brought before the upper house in conjunction with a number of amendments to the judicial code, which were introduced by request of former Governor McGovern. These are the bills introduced shortly after the "amalgamation chasing" inquiry started in Milwaukee. They deal with the ethics of the profession, penalties for fee-splitting and the clearing up of certain rules of judicial conduct.

The normal school and university appropriation bills also are a part of today's heavily loaded calendar but it is doubtful if the legislators will be able to cover more than two-thirds of the night's business. All of these budgets, if approved, will grant large increases in appropriations.

SEEK MILLION MORE

The normal schools have asked more than a million dollars in added appropriations and the university increase is little less than a million. These appropriations would include the expense of construction of the new gymnasium and power plant at Milwaukee Normal school.

Senator Schuman's bill to abolish the department of markets, which was laid over, is upon the same calendar. There is also a motion to reconsider the vote by which the state game bill was killed. This bill would provide a state owned garage in Madison for the state's state owned automobiles.

Senator Gettelman's resolution asking that senators may be allowed to work in the senate chamber without wearing their coats is up for adoption. The weather conditions will probably decide whether the upper house shall have its dignified tradition as has the assembly, or shall maintain its recent rule.

The calendar is by far the largest the senate has had before it for any session, and due to the importance of many of the bills, it is expected a large share of the work will be laid over.

Rubbish Fire

The fire department was called to a small rubbish fire in the rear of Army G. W. College-ave. at 9:45 Tuesday night. The fire was extinguished before any damage resulted.

School Board Meets

The board of industrial education will meet at 6:30 Wednesday evening at Hotel Northern, Herb Hellig, director of Appleton Vocational school, will give his annual report. The meeting will be preceded by a dinner.

The low pressure area which was entered in the Canadian northwest yesterday morning has moved slowly eastward and is now centered over Illinois. This "low" has caused heavy rains and thunderstorms from Iowa eastward to the upper Lake Michigan and light showers over the lower Lake region. The weather will be generally fair here during the next 24 hours, as this "low" is expected to pass too far north to cause more unsettled weather here. In the south and west the weather is mostly fair, with moderate temperatures.

NATIONAL GUARDS NOT ENTITLED TO PENSION, RULING

Madison—(P)—Is a national guardsman a soldier? The question, which has started innumerable arguments between the regular army men and the guardsmen, received additional stimulus when Attorney General Reubens ruled in an opinion that members of the National Guard were not eligible for pensions.

The request for an opinion was made by Adjutant General Immell asking whether a guardsman at Camp Douglas in 1922, was liable for workmen's compensation and pension.

The attorney general ruled that compensation would be granted through application to the industrial commission but that pensions, in the case of guardsmen, were allowed only to their widows or dependents.

CIGARET CAUSES EARLY FIREWORKS DISPLAY

A cigarette carelessly thrown into a box containing fireworks or tossed into the box by a practical joker caused a premature fireworks display at Twelve Corners Monday evening. No one was injured by the explosions and many of the crowd thought that the affair had been pre-arranged to give spectators a thrill. Members of Co. D, 27th Infantry are given credit for preventing a stampede and keeping the crowd orderly during the pyrotechnical display.

A SCENE FROM "THE MUSIC MASTER" FEATURING LOIS MORAN AND NEIL HAMILTON. TO BE SHOWN THURSDAY AND FRIDAY AT FISCHER'S APPLETON THEATRE.

STAGE And SCREEN

"THE MUSIC MASTER" RECALLS AGAIN DAYS OF YORE

Those who cherish memories of the New York of 1900 will have them visualized in the Fox screen version of the Belasco-Warfield triumph, "The Music Master," which will be shown at the Appleton Theatre Thursday and Friday.

The story harks back to the time when horses had equal rights on Broadway, when women had no rights on Election Day, when men had been to shed side whippers and before ladies had even thought of eliminating petticoats. Heavyhoofed Percherons champed down the street drawing vulgar vehicles known as brewery wagons, in contrast to the more dainty footed saddle horses we glimpse in the park nowadays when the weather is favorable.

That was the day of the long train and leg-of-mutton sleeve, believed to be feminine adornment par excellence by the fashionables of the period. It was long before the bob had driven men from their sequestered haunts in barber shops. Incidentally Director Allan Dwan had more than a little difficulty to find enough women with long hair for his scenes.

Those who recall such popular songs as "After the Ball," "Good-bye, Dolly Gray," "Bedelia" and "Hiawatha" will welcome many familiar sights that have been relegated to the picturesque past.

The title role of "The Music Master" is portrayed by Alice Francis, with Lois Moran, Helen Chandler and Neil Hamilton playing prominent part. Bill Tilden, the tennis star, tried his cannon ball service in the role of butler.

U.S. TENNIS STARS TOOK 4 TITLES AT WIMBLEDON TOURNAMENT

Yanks Took All But One Title; Helen Wills Winner Of Womens' Singles Honors

Defeat of Big Bill Tilden by Cochet, French Ace, Was Only Setback

Wimbledon — The 1927 Wimbledon tournament closed Tuesday in a blaze of glory for the United States. The four of the five championships in the hands of American players.

The lone crown was missing — the coveted men's singles — was perched on the brow of little Henri Cochet, the French ace who eliminated William T. Tilden in the semi-finals on his way to his ultimate victory.

With the women's singles won by Helen Wills, and the men's doubles, won by Tilden and Francis T. Hunter, the American players went into the last day's play with the women's doubles and the mixed doubles championships as their goal.

Elizabeth Ryan and Miss Peacock, the bright American star Tuesday, paired with Miss Wills, she won the women's doubles from the South Africans, Miss Bobbie Heine and Mrs. J. Peacock, and then returned to the court after a few minutes' rest and with Hunter raced through the semi-finals of the mixed doubles, winning from another South American team, Louis Raymond and the same little "Bobbie Heine."

Later, as the curtain was about to be rung down over Wimbledon of 1927, she appeared again with Hunter against L. O. Godfree and Miss McKane, Godfree won the mixed doubles title. The California girl's display of fortitude and stamina in her three appearances aroused the keenest admiration from the spectators.

The Williams-Ryan versus Heine-Peacock match, which the American pair won 6-3, 6-2 was the first of the Wimbledon doubles had had its daily shower, the courts were rather slow and the American pair found difficulty in getting started, soon trailing 1-3.

Miss Wills then began shooting tremendous drives at the feet of the South African players, Miss Ryan steered her play after a shaky beginning. Five straight games for the Americans and the set at 6-9 was the result.

Both pairs used closeup formation in the second set and brilliant volleying at the net followed. Despite a gusty wind, the Americans were serving faultlessly, putting the ball away quickly and cleanly, the match soon coming to an end with a 6-2 victory in the second set.

In the very last game, with victory but a step away "little pecker face" Miss Wills broke out into a real ring-lash as Miss Ryan netted an error with the match point at stake. The laugh was one of the few times during the tournament that the American star broke her usual spinix-like expression.

It was the ninth time that Miss Ryan has shared in winning the women's doubles at Wimbledon. She scored first in 1913 with Miss A. M. Morton, then won six times paired with Suzanne Lenglen and last year with Miss Mary K. Browne.

Miss Ryan then made her second appearance of the day, this time with the semi-finals of the mixed doubles against Raymond and Miss Heine. The American pair won 6-3, 6-4, dominating throughout.

In the meantime the English pair consisting of Godfree and his wife, the former Kitty McKane, had defeated Donald Greig and Mrs. M. W. Watson 6-3, 6-4, in the other semi-finals match.

For the third time, Miss Ryan, after a rest for an hour, appeared on the courts with Hunter for the final of the mixed doubles against Mr. and Mrs. Godfree.

The American pair shattered any hopes that England had of winning one of the Wimbledon championships when they took the crown, 8-6, 6-0, after a long struggle.

The 1927 Wimbledon, in spite of the

THIS WEEK'S GAMES
Wednesday—Brandts vs. Legion.
Thursday—Interlakes vs. C. D.
Friday—Post-Crescent vs. Civic Club.

After the set made a liar out of us began up Jones park Tuesday afternoon so that the Badger Printers and the Bankers could play, the two teams gave the dope bucket a wallop and both are tied for third place in league standings. Yes, the Badger beat the Bankers 5 and 7, and although the Post-Crescent doesn't lose the eighth team they have both trimmed up to a tie and that we can launch at one of the two aggregations.

It's said that the game was not quite an exhibition of tip-top baseball and that both teams were guilty of serious errors of mind and body plain errors. But they can be excused on the grounds that the field was muddy, etc. Jacobson and Beyer were the Badger batteries and McKenzie and Stoegbauer worked for the Bankers.

Wednesday evening the Brandts team which has been patched up a bit will try to show the legion how things are done in a ball game. Needless to say they'll have a tough job doing it. For Lothar Graef is improving with age and in another year will have a pitching record that will turn Walter Johnson green with envy. Lothar pitched a one hit game in his last appearance in the club and always has good support. It should be a merry evening for either the players or the gallery gods, or both.

DEMPSEY PRACTICES HITTING WITH LEFT IN HARD DAY'S WORK

Ex-champ Spends Time Perfecting Punch He Hopes to Stop Sharkey With

White Sulphur Springs, Saratoga Lake, N. Y. — Tuesday was "socking" day in the training camp of Jack Dempsey, where the former czar of the heavyweight division is drilling for his drive back to the title throne.

Speed had its place, too, in today's s.w. rounds of boxing, but the fire-slow returning to Dempsey's attack could not be held in restraint. In twenty seconds of one round Jack sent McKinnon, a rugged New York middleweight, flying through the ropes and into the laps of newspaper men with a terrific left hook to the chin. The punch traveled less than a foot, yet Eddie had to be carried to the dressing room, where he dozed until Dave Shaded, Jack's pal from California, climbed into the ring after McKinnon, and forced the big fellow to fight three furious minutes. Dave's weaving style, emulating the type of attack Jack Sharkey expected to employ in the Yankee stadium on July 2, kept Dempsey bobbing in and out, ripping punches from all angles, but it was only in the final minute that Jack really caught up with the coast boy. Then he nailed Dave in a corner and drove three six inch left hooks over the head of the flustered middleweight, feeling his way from the ring when the gong sounded.

The remainder of the session, equivalent to ten rounds of boxing, was completed against Johnny Saxon, Al-Jentown Joe Gans, Marty Burke, and Jack Haldebrand, a light heavyweight from Saratoga, N. Y., who has replaced Carl Carter, Chicago negro, on the payroll. Jack worked a round each with the light and heavy-bags, yanked the chest weights, and spent several minutes doing ring calisthenics and shadow boxing.

McKinnon showed daily improvement. Jack Tuesday had his short punches under nice control and showed no tendency to "swing from the hip." Down off his toes onto the balls of his feet, Dempsey ploughed around the ring in his old stiff-legged style. Under instructions from Manager Mike Jacobs, he practiced knocking down left leads with his right to make openings for the short left hooks that damaged McKinnon and Shaded so badly. He was on the road for two hours Tuesday morning and a half hour pull on the lake Tuesday evening.

Dr. W. C. Frahm, New York sportsman, representing Tex Rickard, examined Dempsey today and announced his physical condition as "splendid."

Another announcement from the camp disclosed that Dempsey will start the twenty-four mile swimming marathon on Lake George, about thirty miles from here, in the morning of July 12.

KIMBERLY RETAINS LEAGUE LEADERSHIP

MONDAY'S RESULTS

Green Bay 9, Menasha 4.
Oshkosh 24, Neenah 3.
Appleton, bye.

Kimberly still rides the top rung of the Fox River Valley league as a result of the weekend games. The K's took a trimming from Green Bay but reaped revenge on Kaukauna Monday and hung onto their lead. The Bays after taking the Cooke outfit for a ride are talking pennant in vehement tones and when Menasha fell before the Clusman bats Monday the Green Sox stock went up a thousand per cent.

Appleton eked out a win Sunday over Kaukauna and took things easy on the Fourth. The Papermakers didn't show much in the sabbath matter and will have to play much better ball if they expect to finish up among the leaders when the season starts to get short. There's not too much faith in the Appleton outfit and a tendency to pass the buck or let an error go with "well he made one too."

Menasha split the weekend bill and are tied up with Oshkosh with an even break of games played. Oshkosh was idle Sunday and slaughtered Neenah Monday afternoon when their northern neighbors tried to win a ball game without a pitcher.

Other honors are being shared by the luckless Kaukauna team but company in the person of Neenah, is not far off. The K's seem to be playing in the fourth tier. When the pitchers are good the team can't hit and when the hitting is up to par the pitching goes haywire. Neenah is in a like boat and if Nixon is to be out of the line up for a couple of games there is going to be plenty of trouble in store for the Neenah aggregation.

HAGEN RILED BRITISH GOLFERS WITH LINEUP

English Captains Accused Sir Walter of Poor Sportsmanship

New York—Only those behind the scenes realized how much friction existed between the captains of the American and British Ryder cup teams.

George Philpot, manager of the invaders, was not under his collar because of what he considered a "tricky lineup" of Americans in the singles. Sportsmanship, of course, dictated that the eight men be picked according to relative skill. The best golfer at No. 2 and the others graduating down to the weakest at No. 8. Philpot hinted that Hagen had shunted his stars about so as to pit strength against British weakness. The Englishman couldn't understand why Turnesa and Golden were rated so low when Hahn had been assigned the No. 2 berth.

Hagen testily denied that he had any idea of "putting over a fast one" on the Brits. The team had been arranged according to his personal judgment as to the present form of the players. He declared that another dispute centered on the matter of substitutes. Americans and Britons have always been as far apart as the poles on this point. It is the American contention that games may be played with an unlimited number of substitutes. British custom looks askance at this practice. Over there they won't put in a substitute even if a player is seriously hurt. His side has to go on one short.

At a council of war in Hagen's room it was decided to put Espinosa in the singles, withdrawing Mohr from the event of a tie at the end of the first eighteen holes.

Tuesday afternoon the men played 13 holes but did not finish because of the threatening weather.

CONNIE MACK SHAKES UP TEAM AND HOWARD EHMKE IS SENT HOME

Athletics Long Losing Streak Blamed on Indifference of Players

Philadelphia — Thoroughly disgusted with the work of the Athletics this season, Connie Mack dealt his machine a severe shock today in Boston when he read the riot act to every member of the squad. He finally wound up by ordering Howard Ehmke, one of the highest salaried pitchers on his staff, to go back to Philadelphia and stay there until he was in condition to chuck 'em.

Just what Mack told his hirelings in the clubhouse shortly before game time could not be learned, but it was said to be plenty and everyone of the attendants came out with drooping heads. That Connie is anticipating a canoeing house at the end of the season is the belief here.

Unless the Athletics brace and play sensational ball on the coming western trip it is a safe bet that three twirlers, two infielders and one outfielder will be in different regalia next year.

Eddie Rummel, Sam Gray and Ehmke are reported to be the men Mack will part with, while Chick Galloway and Max Bishop may also be sent elsewhere. Bill Lamar likewise is due for a change of scenery.

Local followers of the wearers of the white elephant are downright sore on the team as the result of their showing, and Mack will have to do something if his club does not pull itself together.

Ehmke has been a big disappointment this year from the very start of the training trip. He reported at Fox Myers with a sore arm and was in civilian attire more than in uniform during the sojourn in Florida.

He had to stop training altogether for more than a week when he submitted to an operation in which his tonsils were removed. Ehmke seemed to improve rapidly but has not been in good condition since the season started and instead of being one of the bulwarks of the pitching staff, he has lost nine games and won only six.

When he was with the tall-end Boston team he was a hard pitcher to defeat. But this year, with a powerful arm behind him, he has been a steady loser. On the present tour he lost games both in New York and here.

Mack took his action today as a result of Ehmke's weak pitching in the second game on Monday. The Macks won the first game and would have advanced to the next round if they had been able to make a clean sweep.

Mack blames the loss of this game on Ehmke's poor pitching. He pitched to four hitters and walked two while the other two batted the ball safely. They gave the Red Sox such a good start that they scored six runs before succeeding pitchers could get the side out.

As Ehmke is a teetotaler and obeys training rules to the letter, Mack did not fine or suspend him, but will let him stay at home for the rest of the trip.

The characteristic of cackling after laying an egg is handed down from the jungle chickens. The hen, after stealing away to lay her egg, cackles to attract the attention of the rest of the flock that had wandered out of sight.

horn, who had played wildly in his fourth major league season.

When Ted Ray and George Philpot learned of this they were angry. "You have got to go through the singles with the same eight men who played the foursums," declared Ray. "We took Gadd out and we can't put him back now, though we would like to."

Hagen contended that Walker cup precedent permitted a change in lineup for the singles. Walter flashed a telegram from Herbert Ramsey of the U. S. G. A. supporting the American viewpoint. It was finally agreed to let the wisest of the Britons. Hagen deserves credit for yielding on this point. Our English cousin have always gone on the theory that substitutes should never be used in any game once the whistle has blown.

Three of their regular players were out of the game with slight but sufficient injuries. Bob Meusel, their left fielder and a .332 hitter, had a sore leg. Mark Koenig, the shortstop, had a badly bruised thigh. And Joe Dugan, the third baseman had a lame ankle.

The deduction of three regular players from any team is usually a handicap and a good alibi for defeat. But what happened to the Yankees?

Miller Huggins put Cedric Durst in left field and God helped break up two of the ball games. He put Ray Morehart at second and Ray drove in the winning run in an eleven inning battle and saved up another game with a home run. Then, as the exigencies of the case presented themselves, Huggins shifted from third to short, and to third and from third to short, and Tony played two positions other than his own without an error, scored six runs for the Yankees and made three home runs in one game. In addition there was the stirring spectacle of Myler Thomas taking a same day hit 11 to 11 in the tenth inning and pitching under stress for two innings without a hit.

All of which is recited to show that the Yankees not only have a good ball club, but also that they have as good reserve strength as any team on the league, and the White Sox series proved it.

The Fourth they stopped the second place Senators' win streak by scores of 12 to 1 and 21 to 1. That was another test.

PLAYGROUND NOTES

Wednesday's softball games in the playground loop will find the 6th and 3rd wards playing on the latter grounds and the 4th and 5th wards will meet at the 6th ward grounds. The junior, senior and intermediate boys and girls will follow this schedule.

There is a boys' swimming meet scheduled for next week in the Y. M. C. A. pool for all boys 16 and under. The meet will show the youngsters in diving contests and in races and stunts. The meet will be open to the public.

A hike for the junior boys will be held Saturday morning with John W. Pugh, boys' work secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in charge. The boys will meet at the Y at not later than 9 o'clock and will return about 3 at which time they will be permitted to use the association pool.

Lawrence Bohon who has had charge of the mens' and boys' activities at the 6th ward playground has resigned to take charge of a boys' camp for the summer. No permanent director has been appointed.

A report from the third ward of girl activities show that they have played and won one kickball game in the junior classification, lost all three indoor baseball games in the same group and won two ball games in the senior girls' league.

Joseph R. Shields, director of the playground activities has returned to his work after having been confined to the hospital with a broken leg and is making complete plans for the rest of the season.

All the youngsters and older folks who have been using the playgrounds from time to time are asked to be at their grounds Friday afternoon when pictures of the different activities will be taken.

It is possible that a dark horse will leap into the picture in September. This would not be unwelcome, especially if the dark horse be dressed in the Stars and Stripes. What is of more interest is that the supporters of all five favorites can find adequate selling points to show why either Tilden, Borotra, Cochet, La Coste or Johnston is due to emerge on top.

Of course, the Davis cup matches immediately preceding the championships will have a bearing on the discussion when it gets that close to tournament time.

DEVELOPMENT OF
AMERICAN UNIONIndependence Day Speaker
Lauds Ideals of United States Government

Special to Post-Crescent

New London—Attorney M. C. Eberlein of Shawano, was the speaker at the Fourth of July celebration given under the auspices of the American legion and the American legion auxiliary Sunday and Monday. Mr. Eberlein spoke during the afternoon program Monday on "The Achievement of a Great People."

He called our government the "grandest government on earth." "But," he stated, "it was not always thus. In 1776 we were a group of 13 weak and struggling colonies. And slowly, step by step, in spite of untold hardships and reverses we have developed into a perfect union of 48 states."

"Goaded on by the determination that a golden crown on a brainless head shall not rule us, the colonists drew up their demands. The refusal to accept their terms led to the Revolutionary war, the loss of which would have been a death warrant for every signer of the declaration of Independence, but their victory brought us lasting Independence, a heritage to our government, our selves and our birthright. The guiding influence at that time was the firm conviction that God Almighty wanted this nation to live, wanted those venerable fathers of '76 to win," the speaker declared.

"The grand old principle, that all men are born free and equal was settled apparently for this nation. But again there existed among the people who lived in this free and equal country of ours a faction who wanted slavery. And again the nation suffered untold hardships when the blue and the grey met in conflict, and there was chosen from among the toiling people one who stood high in the principles of manhood and righteousness. Abraham Lincoln, firm in his belief that to be a peaceful nation we must all be friends and there must be no factions."

GOOD FOR FREEDOM

"Abraham Lincoln realized that the Declaration for Independence must be a truthful document to every word and that every citizen of the United States regardless of race, must be free and independent. And again this question was settled this time by the boys of the J. A. R."

"In the conflict of 1917 more than 4,000,000 of our men were called to the colors." The speaker said. "These men are found today in all walks of life, and in all positions in the business world. It depends on these boys to hand down this war as a great achievement. They must maintain and exemplify the principle for which they offered their lives. It is not alone what was done in the heat of the fight, that will make these boys famous but they must now live to show their contribution to the institutions and society of our country." He urged the world war veterans to lead lives of good citizenship and follow only the most upright principles. Continue to be builders, "he urged, "and do not destroy. Remember the Great Being who has made all achievements possible. And see that the great principles for which you and your ancestors fought shall be written indelibly in the great book of our nation."

If your Pavement is Bad,
re-surface it with BRICK

Perhaps your street is in bad condition and you are considering having it re-built.

Why not get full salvage value for your old street pavement by using it as a base for a fine brick surface.

Extensive tests conducted by the U. S. Government prove that various materials make excellent bases for brick surfaces. Your City Engineer is familiar with these Government findings. Ask him about brick surfacing old pavement.

Paving brick, being vitrified, makes the finest known wearing surface for any street. This surface is tough—nothing on wheels can damage it. It has a resilient sand cushion to take up traffic shocks. It is totally proof against destructive weather conditions—thus actual insurance of lowest paving cost.

Brick surfaced streets look attractive. They are safe and smooth riding and always open to traffic.

"The A. B. C. of Good Paving," a taxpayer's manual, tells in words and pictures how engineers today build over-wearing, low cost, brick surfaced roads and streets. Address your request to National Paving Brick Manufacturers' Association, 322 South Michigan Avenue, Chicago.

Here Is A Story Of Rich Duponts Who Like To Work But Crash No Social Gates

"America's most interesting family." That is what Hortense Saunders, writer for NEA Service and Post-Crescent, calls the du Pont family, of Delaware. Super-romance marks the rise of this family to untold wealth and vast industrial influence. Between the du Ponts and most other immensely rich American families there are striking contrasts. Miss Saunders visited Delaware to find out all about the du Ponts, and has written four stories on them. This is the first. The second will tell of the growth of the du Pont industries.

BY HORTENSE SAUNDERS
Wilmington, Del.—Within a radius of a dozen or so miles from Wilmington lives the most interesting family—or family of families—in America. It's the du Pont family, about 100 strong.

Family relations being inevitable, there may be some du Ponts in Delaware who struggle along on a few hundred thousands, but the feeling in Delaware is that a du Pont, unless he is a minor, scarcely can be excused from the family obligation to have a six-figure bank account.

Nevertheless, the du Ponts are as plain as old shoes, in the words of the head of the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce.

They are used to their money, and Delaware is used to it, so everybody, including the du Ponts, just forgets about it.

RICH BUT HUMAN
They wear their old clothes when they feel like it, they drive their own cars, go by their first names.

Whenever the community needs anything, the du Ponts generally provide it. With their property and industrial wealth running far into the hundreds of millions, they constitute the nearest approach to a feudal unit of any family in the country.

They avoid all obvious manifestations of affluence. They don't play polo on Long Neck, Newport, don't gamble at Monte Carlo, don't compete in building private palaces.

The du Ponts apparently like to work. The sons go to college, usually a technical school, then come home and work up in the family business—any business.

E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Company, one of the largest corporations in the world. The daughters go away to school, but come back to Wilmington to marry—usually to marry men in the du Pont company. Often they marry poor men.

ALONG KENNARD PIKE
You get vivid impressions of the du Ponts if you drive out Kennard Pike, which runs from the du Pont home in Wilmington to Longwood, the estate of Pierre S. du Pont just over the state line in Pennsylvania.

This estate contains one of the finest conservatories in the country. Orchids and azaleas are two indulgences which Pierre du Pont allows himself. But his magnificent collection of flowers and shrubs is open to the public. Any one who so wishes can revel in the color and fragrance.

Twice a month, on Sunday afternoons, pipe organs are given in an underground theater at the estate. Proceeds of a small admission fee go to Wilmington's three hospitals. As you travel along the Kennard Pike, a ribbon stretch of road built by Pierre himself and presented to the state, you will find the du Ponts, the right of you and du Ponts to the left of you—along with other people who have worked with them and grown rich in the process.

GLORIFIED FARM HOUSES
The du Ponts live in glorified farm houses. You see old homes that have sprouted new additions and wings.

idyllic pastures where very cubistic-looking black and white cows are grazing—and then knows where all the spotted calf fur comes from. The cows and pastures passed from the late Col. Henry du Pont to his son.

A side road angles off to Eugene du Pont's place. The main road goes by the foundations of a new place being built by Mrs. Bessie du Pont, divorced wife of Alfred I. du Pont.

So it is that the homes of the du Ponts are scattered about the countryside. It would take days to see them all.

HOW IT ALL STARTED
They are homes that grew out of powder and dynamite. Thomas Jefferson really laid their foundations, for it was Jefferson who first suggested to Eleuthere Irenee du Pont de Nemours, founder of the company that bears his name, that he go into the powder-manufacturing business away back in 1802.

Jefferson's French friend took his advice. The gigantic industrial structure which Lamont du Pont now heads and the vast fortunes which du Ponts by the dozens have amassed are the results.

New York (AP)—Stock prices displayed a strong undertone at the opening of Wednesday's market, as a good investment demand for the season's dividend-paying issues.

Early gains of 1 to 2 points were recorded by American Water Works, Eastern Kodak and Chesapeake and Ohio.

Prospects of easier money rates stimulated pool activities in various specialties, while the high priced shares were accumulated in anticipation of a continuing dividend demand.

Railroad traffic for the first six months broke all records but the total for the week ended June 25, was again below that of the corresponding period last year.

Chicago and Eastern Illinois preferred stocks moved up 2 points to a new high.

Coal shares were heavy. Barnard Brothers A and Dittusburg Coal sold down a point. Foreign exchange rates were irregularly lower.

Setas dropping 5 1/2 to 5 points to around 4.52 cents and Spanish Petroleum dropping 5 1/2 to 4.50 cents.

Demand steady and French francs held fairly steady around $4.85 and 1/2.

Higher dividends by several industrial corporations added momentum to the upward sweep of prices during the morning which raised the price of shares from 2 1/2 to 3 points above the previous close.

Among the shares representing such varied industries as Atlantic Refining, Continental, Bakelite, Consolidated Chemical, Tinkens Roller Bearing, Famous Players, Worthington Pump and Machinery Electrical supply, the revenue rate for call loans was unchanged at 4 1/2 per cent.

The closing was strong. Total sales approximated 1,700,000 shares.

Be Careful Of Drinking Water While Traveling

During the summer months tourists tour the country, going from place to place, stopping frequently at summer camps. Among the chief dangers to which they expose themselves are the drinking of water not properly protected against typhoid fever or dysentery germs.

Many camps have improper sewage disposal; others have places for supplying food which are not controlled as to the purity of materials sold or as to freedom from bacterial contamination.

John Walker Harrington recently described in Hygieia the manner in which some camps protect the traveler.

ing public. It must be borne in mind that most people are careless in the matter of drinking water. Any water that is exposed cannot be guaranteed as to its drinking qualities. Therefore, all wayside springs are best avoided with concrete and their discharge conducted by pipes to a river or to sewers.

Spring water is taken from lakes, filtered and treated with chlorine so as to make it safe. It has been found the standpipes in the railroad stations with signs to the effect that the water is not good for drinking purposes.

In order to prevent contamination of springs by sewage, camps are permitted within restricted areas, and are provided, as are the trails as well, with suitable comfort stations. These must be screened to prevent the entrance of flies. They rest usually on septic tanks of concrete in which a strong solution of caustic soda reduces all sewage to a fluid. This may then be pumped into wheeled tanks and released into sewage disposal plants.

Bathing pools likewise provided with filtered water which is chlorinated. The pools are emptied regularly and the walls and bottom scrubbed with heavy filter brushes dipped in chemical solutions. When clothes are laundered they must be boiled and hung in the sunlight to dry.

occasionally seeks distraction from the rigor of driving by cooking in his traveling kitchen. The inside seats of the automobile folds flat to make beds for the two women. Specially constructed running boards at the side extend into beds for the men.

MAN SOUGHT SINCE 1924 RECOGNIZED BY DESK SERGEANT

An excellent memory possessed by Earl Vande Bogart, desk sergeant at the police station, is responsible for the trouble which Jim Devine now finds himself.

Devine was arrested Tuesday afternoon by Motorcycle Officer Herter for drunkenness and when he was taken to the police station he was recognized by "Vande Bogart as the man the police force has been seeking since March 24, 1924, when word was received that Devine was wanted for passing a worthless check for $125.

The word came from a stranger part of this tale is that Vande Bogart hadn't seen Devine for 20 years and the latter was quite the worse for wear because of his spree.

Vande Bogart got into commotion with Green Bay authorities and learned Devine still was wanted. The Brownie sheriff called for him Wednesday morning.

FEW VETERANS WILL GET SCHOOL BONUS

World War Soldiers No Longer in Position to Attend Schools

Madison—(AP)—Less than two hundred veterans of the World war are expected by Captain John Mullen, of the state adjutant general's department, to take advantage of the extended educational bonuses provided in a bill just signed by governor Zimmerman, and thereby made a law.

ment for three more years. They are valued at about $1,050 in cash.

With passage and signing of the bill, payment of cash bonuses stopped. Up to this time those who served in the World war were offered a cash bonus of $10 for each month the "service" and they were offered an educational bonus of $30 a month for only one year.

Many who would have availed themselves of the opportunities offered by the educational bonus under the former law did not, because of the short (one year) term it provided. With the prospect of four years of educational aid, it is expected that more former service men will enroll in the various schools throughout the state.

Capit Mullen, pension officer with the state adjutant general's office, thinks that approximately 150 persons will enroll in Wisconsin schools this fall under provision of the new bill.

"The number is kept down," he said, "because many of the men who got out of the service eight and nine years ago are settled down, and it is difficult for them to arrange to resume their schooling."

About 120,000 persons enlisted for service in the World war from Wisconsin, and technically they would be eligible to benefit by the recently passed bill, but information from the adjutant-general's office indicates that only a very small percentage of this number will go to school under the provisions granted in the bill.

The bill provides that $30 a month shall be paid for four years, with the cash and educational bonuses already received being deducted during the first months of schooling. Not more than $1,050 can be collected.

150 PERSONS ENROLLED IN CHURCH CONFERENCE

Hilpon—(AP)—The Green Lake conference, the second of two conferences to be scheduled this summer by the Wisconsin Congregational young people, opened today with a record enrollment of more than 150 persons.

The Green Lake conference, lasting one week, was preceded by the Northland College meeting, from June 18-25. Dr. Robert W. Gammon, Chicago, camp executive, is being assisted in the work of camp leadership by the Rev. Charles P. Reidt, of Fond du Lac.

Of the 150 delegates, not more than 12 have been allowed to register from one church, and at least one of each group is an adult.

The first official act of the camp will be held this evening when a "sing" has been scheduled following the introduction of delegates and enrollment for classes.

A regular daily schedule will be kept during the week starting with a rising bell at 6:30 and ending in the evening with vespers. Classes, all characterized by a religious tone, will be held throughout the day.

Organized recreation during the afternoon will be in charge of an athletic director. Mass games, hikes, tennis, and swimming are on the program.

RECORD BREAKING CROWD USES TOURISTS' CAMP

Several hundred tourists from all parts of the United States spent some time at Allida park tourist camp site over the holidays, according to E. E. Lutz, caretaker. The majority of tourists were from Illinois and Wisconsin and most of the cars remained one night. Many of them arrived late in the evening and were on their way again early the next morning. There were as many cars traveling south as north, Mr. Lutz said.

For centuries the Chinese concealed their secret of the manufacture of silk goods. The western world never had heard of the silk-worm and thought the fiber came from a part of sheep's wool.
